

We do not remember our childhood in school, we do not remember our childhood in the park and we do not remember our childhood in the city; simply because we lived the best moments of our childhood on the beach.

We were small, the summers were long but the days were short; the whole family would meet for two months to live together to create memories together that after many years today make us long for them.

We were doing? Easy, picking up cones, playing polo in the pool, fishing, stargazing, eating junk, watching horror movies.

We woke up early to sleep late and so for eight weeks I shot the happiest people until it was time to return to life, with nostalgia, and with tanned feet back to the city for nothing more and nothing less than telling our adventures of "The House of the beach"
